

VOTE Ombudsmen

VOTE Ombudsmen

OVERVIEW

Appropriations sought for Vote Ombudsmen in 1999/2000 total $3.648 million (GST inclusive). This is intended to purchase:

- $3.424 million on investigation and resolution of complaints about government agencies at central, regional and local levels.
- $224,000 to permit the Ombudsmen to maintain a higher profile within the prison system.

VOTE Ombudsmen

VOTE MINISTER: THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE

ADMINISTERING DEPARTMENT: OFFICE OF THE OMBUDSMEN (see note 1)

The Speaker is the Responsible Minister for the Office of the Ombudsmen

Part A - Statement of Objectives and Trends

Part A1 - Objectives for Vote Ombudsmen

The appropriations in Vote Ombudsmen help fulfil Parliament's intent through the Ombudsmen Act 1975, the Official Information Act 1982 and the Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act 1987 and make an important contribution to the maintenance and enhancement of "open" government within New Zealand.

Specifically, the Ombudsmen contribute to improved public administration and access to official information, and enhanced public confidence in government administration. The dissemination of information assists the public in understanding government administration.

The appropriations will purchase:

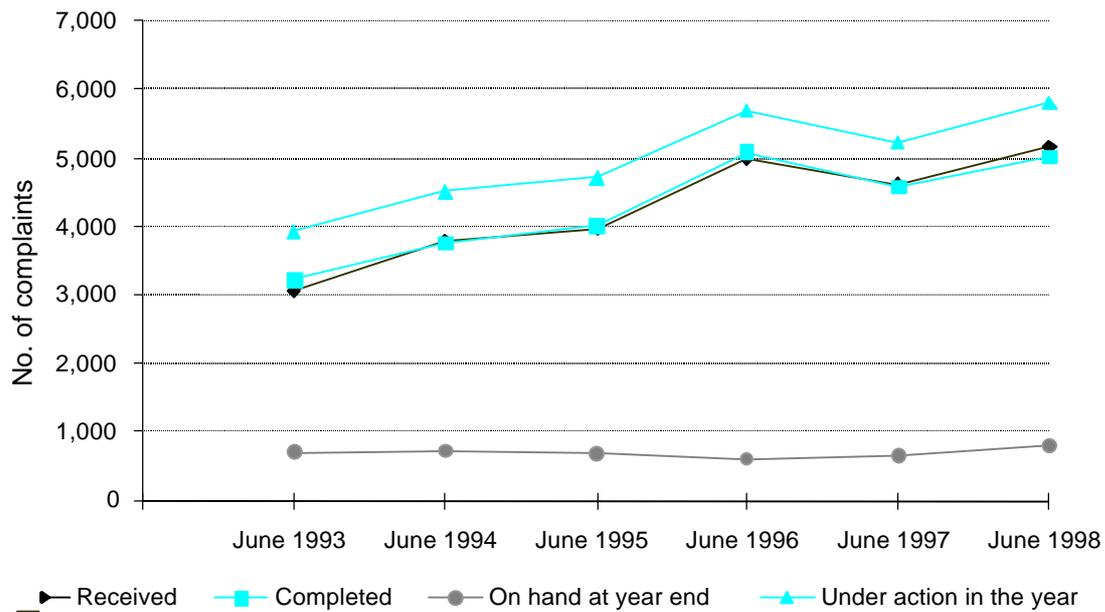

- the independent investigation of citizens' complaints:
 - under the Ombudsmen Act arising from any act, omission, decision or recommendation relating to a matter of administration and affecting persons in their personal capacity by any government agencies at central, regional or local level
 - under the Official Information Act and the Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act about decisions on requests for access to official information held by any Minister of the Crown, or any government agencies at central, regional or local level
 - where justified, the recommendation of appropriate remedial action to resolve those complaints
- investigations either on a complaint made to an Ombudsman by any person or group of persons, or in the case of investigations under the Ombudsmen Act, by an Ombudsman of his/her own motion
- the maintenance of the Ombudsmen's extended involvement in the investigation of complaints from inmates in penal institutions.

Part A2 - Trends in Vote Ombudsmen

Since 1993, but particularly in recent times, there has been a noticeable increase in the number of Ombudsmen Act and official information legislation complaints received. The number, complexity and sensitivity of Official Information Act complaints in particular have increased markedly over this period. The growth in work is attributable to three factors:

- A growing awareness of the official information legislation and a willingness by members of the public to question and seek explanations of government at all levels for the decisions and actions affecting them.
- Greater use of the Official Information Act by the public, parliamentarians and their research units.
- Following the Logan Report on Mangaroa Prison, a higher profile within the prisons system from 1 April 1995.

d Excludes the Ombudsmen.

An improved understanding of the operation of the Ombudsmen Act, and official information legislation in particular, within the local, regional and central government sectors is expected to limit demand for investigations to the existing level of about 5,200 complaints in the current year. The annual figure represents cases for which a file is made and an investigation commenced or advice/guidance given.

Although the introduction of the Privacy Act in 1993 was expected to reduce the work of the Ombudsmen by removing to the Privacy Commissioner complaints about refusal of access to personal information about the requester, this has not happened. The workload for the Ombudsmen has increased, particularly in relation to requests for information about advice given to and by government agencies, government policy and other similar matters. By nature, these complaints are generally complex, sensitive and resource intensive.

Over the past two years, the main driver of the increased demand has been requests for investigation received from “parliamentary” sources and individuals. During the past year, however, complaints from “parliamentary” sources have reduced as a proportion of the new work received, but the reduction has been made up by a similarly sized growth in complaints from individuals. The increased demand means that the Office expects to:

- complete fewer Official Information Act complaint investigations than it receives in the 1999/2000 reporting year. Complaints on hand at 30 June 1999 (all jurisdictions) are expected to increase from a forecast 750 to 800 for the current year to 800 to 900 at 30 June 2000
- increase the time required to resolve Official Information Act complaints.

Additionally, the Office of the Ombudsmen extends advice to approximately 4,000 people each year, who contact it by telephone or in person.

Significant changes to the cost structure of the Office since 1993 are due to the following:

- From 1 April 1995 the Ombudsmen adopted a higher profile within the prison service.
- From February 1995 remuneration costs for the Ombudsman, previously met from Vote Ombudsmen, became a cost to Vote Courts. The cost of the Chief Ombudsman's remuneration remains a charge to Vote Ombudsmen.
- For the 1997/98 and 1999/2000 financial years, the Officers of Parliament Committee approved a baseline adjustment to assist the Office to deal with the increased number and complexity of complaints received.

Part C - Explanation of Appropriations for Output Classes

Introduction

The Ombudsmen are independent Officers of Parliament appointed by the Governor-General on the recommendation of the House of Representatives. Their functions are to investigate and form opinions on the merits of complaints about the administrative acts and decisions of government agencies at central, regional or local levels and to review decisions about requests for access to official information held by any Minister of the Crown or central, regional or local government department or organisation. They report annually and are accountable to Parliament rather than the Government.

The appropriations in this Vote were commended to the Governor-General by the House of Representatives in an address, on the recommendation of the Officers of Parliament Committee.

Part C1 - Departmental Output Classes

Output Class D1 - Investigation and Resolution of Complaints about Government Administration

Description

This class of outputs involves the investigation under the Ombudsmen Act of complaints arising from the acts, omissions, decisions and recommendations of government agencies at central, regional or local levels, including decisions on requests for information under the Official Information Act and the Local Government and Official Information and Meetings Act.

Quantity

The Chief Ombudsman expects to provide Parliament with:

- 3,300 completed investigations pursuant to the Ombudsmen Act
- 1,380 completed investigations pursuant to the official information legislation
- 520 completed complaint investigations which require preliminary consideration and/or investigation but which are found to be outside Ombudsmen jurisdiction
- an average of seven visits to each of the penal institutions throughout New Zealand.

Quality

The quality of investigations is to be assured through Ombudsmen involvement in each and every complaint investigation and by ensuring that all complaints are investigated by suitably qualified and trained investigating staff.

Timeliness

All reports and investigations and inquiries will be responded to within the following timeframes agreed by the Ombudsmen and published in the Office's 1999/2000 Departmental Forecast Report and reported in its Annual Report.

Average number of working days to complete investigations under:

- Ombudsmen Act 42 working days
- Official Information Act 68 working days
- Local Government Official Information and Meetings Act 55 working days
